

Rutgers

For Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights

In many countries women, young people and marginalised groups lack freedom and/or information to make their own choices when it comes to their sexual and reproductive health and rights (SRHR). We use our knowledge of and expertise in SRHR both in the Netherlands as well as abroad, in countries where a great deal is left to be desired concerning these issues. To continue our efforts is necessary for future generations in our country as well as elsewhere.

Aim

Improving the sexual and reproductive health and rights (SRHR) of people in Europe, Africa and Asia, that is where Rutgers wants to play a leading role. We succeed in discussing sexual and reproductive health issues, such as family planning and the right to self-determination, even in countries where these are viewed as sensitive topics.

We respect cultural nuances when implementing projects, training sessions and lesson packages.

Apart from this, we do scientific research and we passionately advocate for progressive policies for sexual and reproductive health and rights in order to change (civil) society. This combination makes us unique.
